Family Covenant on Climate Stewardship

We will be mindful of our covenantal relationship with God and Creation and of the sacred integrity of Creation. We will seek to do one or more of the following:

- Recognize that, although we are few, our actions and inactions, intentional and unintentional, impact Creation. We open our hearts to God's call to be good stewards of God's Creation.
- Learn about how climate change is already affecting lives across the globe.
- Be informed about climate stewardship and specific actions we can take to support climate stewardship.
- Make our home more energy efficient.
- Buy locally.
- Support renewable energy production by purchasing renewable energy certificates.*
- Support constructive efforts we can take, as a state, to help reduce greenhouse gas emissions; for example, through wind energy; perennial non-woody biomass (e.g. switchgrass and other native prairie grasses); coal gasification with carbon capture and geologic sequestration; and terrestrial carbon sequestration through good stewardship of prairie soils and wetlands.
